AN INSIGHT INTO SOCIAL ISSUES

This edited book contains the social issues or problems that have been recognized by society as a serious problem now-a-days. It is important to understand that not all things that occur in society are raised to the level of social problems. It is the crying need to get rid of undesirable social evils. Educators and communities are facing challenges of different undesirable social issues like 'Triple Talaq', 'Child Trafficking', 'Dowry System', 'Article 370', 'Domestic Violence', 'Gender Issues', 'NRC', 'Inculcation of Values', Novel Corona Virus (COVID - 19) etc. These are to be prevented in society from functioning at an optimal level. The present book will focus onto deep insight of the above mentioned social issues edited by the under mentioned academicians.

ABSTRACT

Education is an activity having its relationship with other aspects of life. Access to good education in general and higher education in particular, therefore, open up many avenues in individual life and positively contribute to human resource pool of the nation. Higher education in India has grown remarkably since independence. Public and private initiatives, have both, contributed to its development. Historically, the flag-bearer of Western education in India was Bengal. Its early interaction with the colonial rule, socio-cultural regeneration and renaissance in the 19th century gave her an edge over the rest of the country in education, especially in higher education. In the years following independence, even till the early years of the 21st century, higher education in West Bengal, primarily remained the concern of the government and the government acted as its primary provider. However, in the last decade or so, in keeping with the national trend of permitting private enterprises in areas of higher education, West Bengal has witnessed proliferation of privately run institutes of higher learning, particularly in areas like engineering, management, and institutes providing teachers' training. The present paper endeavors to highlight the concern and challenges posed by these self-financed technical institutes with special reference to West
